You may exclude existing Meal or Educational Benefits applications if they are no longer relevant, but should be retained for historical purposes. Excluded applications are not considered by the application verification process and may not be accurate representations of current student eligibilities or household information.

When an application is excluded, its associated eligibility is revoked. Campus changes student eligibilities to those assigned by the most current application or other existing eligibility. If no current application exists, student eligibilities are considered a default status of "Paid."

If students have purchased meals using the eligibility assigned by the application, it should NOT be excluded.

Once the verification process has been started, the Exclude functionality cannot be used for any household applications. In the event an application has been selected for Verification, a notification will display when trying to use the Exclude option.

The screenshot shows the 'Household Applications' interface. At the top, there are navigation links: 'FRAM > Application Processing > Household Applications'. Below this are several action buttons: 'New', 'Amend', 'Copy Application', 'Delete', 'Exclude', and 'Print'. The 'Exclude' button is highlighted with a red box and a red arrow pointing to a warning message box. The warning message reads: 'issuetest81105.infinitecampus.com says Warning: You are about to EXCLUDE a Free/Reduced Application. The student's eligibility data will also be deleted or changed. Are you sure you want to exclude this application?'. At the bottom of the warning box are 'OK' and 'Cancel' buttons. Below the screenshot, there is a caption: 'Warning message that displays after the Exclude button is selected'.
